Celebrate New School Building Next Week

A week of celebration will be held January 14th to 18th at the Ocean Beach school, Sunset Cliffs Blvd. and Santa Monica Ave. to signalize the opening of its fine new primary building and auditorium. There will be many room demonstration lessons, room teas, special meetings and programs.

Several outstanding meetings will be held during the week.

On Tuesday evening, January 15, at 7:30 o'clock a meeting will be held for the formal opening of the new auditorium. The chairman of the evening will be Ray Reynolds, member of the Board of Education and resident of Ocean Beach. The speaker will be Mr. Will C. Crawford, new superintendent of schools in San Diego. This will be the first opportunity residents of Ocean Beach have had to hear and see Mr. Crawford. In addition to the speakers there will be songs and dances by school children and a short play. All parents and friends are cordially invited to come to the meeting.

Wednesday, January 16, at 12:30 noon, a general men-only luncheon will be held. The luncheon is a joint meeting of the Kiwanis club, Chamber of Commerce, Masons, Veterans of Foreign wars, and American Legion groups of Ocean Beach and is open to all men of the community. The chairman of the meeting will be Jay D. Conner, San Diego director of elementary education. The speaker will be Dr. Edward L. Hardy, president of San Diego State college. This will be the first time in many years that Dr. Hardy has spoken in Ocean Beach, and the community is fortunate in the opportunity to hear him. In addition to Dr. Hardy's talk the third grade glee club will sing, and the kindergarten band will play. The meeting will close with a tour of the building. All men of Ocean Beach are cordially invited to attend the luncheon. Please phone reservations to the school, BV-0071-W, by Monday, January 14. Luncheon is 40c.

The formal dedication of the new building will be on Friday, January 18th, at 2:00 p. m. in the new auditorium. The speaker at the dedication will be Dr. Chester Webber, president of the Board of Education; Richmond Barbour, principal of the school, will be chairman of the meeting. All parents and friends of Ocean Beach are cordially invited and urged to attend this formal dedication event.

Finally, an open house for visitors will be held in the classrooms from 2:45 to 4:00 Friday afternoon.

A complete program for the whole week has been sent out by children of the school to their parents and friends, this program covers all activities of the celebration starting Monday at 9:15 and ending Friday afternoon.

FOOD SALE

The ladies of the Methodist church will hold a food sale at the Ocean Beach Hardware store, Saturday morning, January 12.

FOUR WAY STOP ORDERED FOR NEWPORT AND BACON ST.

In the business of the San Diego city council Tuesday, was the ordering of an ordinance declaring that cars entering Newport and Bacon streets, and eight other city intersections, must come to a complete stop before proceeding.

And this little item—Referred to City Manager and Councilman Al Bennett, proposition for city to purchase old Crystal pier at Pacific Beach and operate it.

Chamber Commerce Will Elect New Officers For 1935

Duty of Business People Assist In Program of Advancement

Next Monday evening, January 14th, the Ocean Beach chamber of commerce should elect new officers for the year 1935. Every person interested in the development of Ocean Beach should be there.

While during the past year this organization has not accomplished everything it has set out to do, nevertheless there has been an earnest endeavor on the part of the directors to secure a number of projects of local benefit.

One of the first objectives was the setting aside of the old dance hall at foot of Newport avenue for a recreation center to be operated by the city playground commission.

This city department appropriated several hundred dollars and our councilman of this district said it would open at a certain time but those in authority decided otherwise and this hall was not secured for a playground center. Later in the season the old merry-go-round building was leased for a year and has been a very popular place most every afternoon and evening of the week for volley ball, volley tennis and other games of the same nature.

In January, 1934, committees were appointed to work with others for a new grammar school building. This project went forward to a successful conclusion and a plant costing over $40,000, with a splendid auditorium is available.

In April request was made of the city manager and others in order to have beaches cleaned up for the summer, this request was slow being granted, but during May, clean-up was started and continued until the end of the vacation season in September. Nearly $100.00 was raised the first week in May by a card party and dance for benefit of the Crippled Children's therapeutic pool in San Diego. During the same month request was made for cleaning up Sunset Cliffs park and repair of stairway at foot of Del Monte avenue.

During a two or three month period an effort was made to secure a recreation and fishing pier. A lot of effort was put forth, large committees met with the city council of San Diego, a petition of more than 2,000 names was circulated in less than three days and for a week or so it looked as though this project was assured, however, at the crucial time the councilman of our district failed to co-operate, and as a result the matter was tabled and has never again been taken up. The members furthering this project arrived at the conclusion that there would be no use attempting to work with the present council set-up.

For the last Saturday of June the chamber of commerce sponsored and supported an Old Timers Barbecue and celebration which brought several thousand people to the beach and was recognized as the biggest drawing card and event which had taken place here for ten or more years. By charging a nominal price for the barbecue dinner, all expenses of this event were made the day it was celebrated.

The two projects above brought a lot of favorable publicity to Ocean Beach and the efforts should be continued.

In July the organization requested the Automobile club of California to sign the Causeway road directing traffic to the beach over the newly completed West Point Loma Blvd. This sign was placed just a few weeks after it was requested.

On two occasions the SERA band was requested for concerts here, and the request granted if the Club would defray bus expense of $5.00 for each trip, which was done.

Several meetings were held at which candidates for public office spoke and set forth aims and qualifications.

Several smaller favors were requested from the park department and others. One of these was the piping of water to the horse shoe court, which was done, though another request for water to Collier park for the baseball diamond and club use, has never been accomplished.

In November a meeting was held to hear complaints of residents regarding problem of housing Japanese. At this meeting petitions were ordered prepared and were to be circulated for signatures by a special committee.

At a meeting held December 10th the entire school board as well as representatives of most other organizations on Point Loma met for the purpose of discussing a site for a new junior high school. This meeting was largely attended and the city school board members as individuals each voiced being in favor of securing as large a part of Collier park as was available for this very much needed project. This matter is now under investigation by committees from the school board and the chamber of commerce. If the school system is allowed to build its requirements here, three years will see an 18 to 20 unit school plant completed in Collier park.

There is much work to do in 1935, and the earlier it is started the sooner we shall benefit from its completion.

The Ocean Beach chamber of commerce should now receive the undivided support of every business person in the community. Funds are available for recreation and permanent work projects and if each local unit does not make a bid for same, these funds and their resultant benefits will go elsewhere. It is not enough to receive the small amount of your dues each year. It is necessary that you attend the meetings, present your ideas, and if the majority believe them to be sound and feasible they will receive the endorsement of the club and if of mutual benefit or worthwhile to the community should be accomplished.

A complete survey should be made of our beach district, after new officers are elected, and then an effort made to carry out and accomplish those things which will benefit Ocean Beach, Point Loma and San Diego. Sunset Cliffs park should get its share of improvement each year from park taxes which are levied annually. The beaches from Point Loma to La Jolla should be kept clean all the year through—they are a disgrace to San Diego about half the year. That recreation center we wanted near the street car junction last year we did not get owing to land title—perhaps this has been settled now so we can go ahead as originally planned. Then a mod-

Junior High School Continues Live Subject

During the meeting of the San Diego city school board Monday evening there was considerable discussion regarding needs of the junior high schools. A report was filed showing enrollment and housing situation at Point Loma Junior-Senior High school.

This week alone fifteen new pupils have enrolled at our local high school. During the session Ray Reynolds, member of the school board said:

"During the last several months we have discussed making necessary enlargements at Alice Birney, Herbert Hoover and Point Loma schools. So far, however, we have formulated no definite policies for these projects. I should like to see definite information obtained at Memorial and then let's go ahead on all these projects."

City Manager George Buck notified the board members that the section of Collier park, on Point Loma, which was suggested as the logical site for the construction of a junior high school in that district, would have to be transferred to the school district by a special election. The board members voted to meet with residents of the district and representatives of the city manager's office to make a survey and determine how much of the park area would be needed.

MRS. GRAY DIES AT HOME OF DAUGHTER IN COLORADO

Mrs. Mary E. Gray passed away January 5th, in Delta, Colorado, at the home of her daughter Mrs. Mayme Ambrose.

Mrs. Gray was one of Ocean Beach's pioneer residents. She is survived by a son, Lee Gray of Hotchkiss, Colo., and daughter, Mrs. Mayme Ambrose of Delta, Colo., and cousin J. W. Dick of Ocean Beach.

Funeral services will be held Friday morning from Johnson-Saunders Interment at Greenwood cemetery.

TO TEACH LATEST PIANO METHODS

Miss Marjorie Williams announces the opening of classes in piano for beginning and advanced pupils in our classified column this week. Miss Williams is a graduate of Dana's Musical Institute of Warren, Ohio, with a B. A. degree and has attained success with her teaching ability in the east. The latest piano methods for children are used and the progress of her pupils are displayed by public performance.

For further information see our classified column.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE LECTURE RADIOCAST

Residents of this vicinity will have an opportunity to hear an authorized Christian Science lecture over KFOX Monday, January 14, at 8 p. m., when Judge Samuel W. Greene, C. S. B., of Chicago, Ill., a member of the Board of Lectureship of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass., lectures for Third Church of Christ, Scientist, Long Beach, in the edifice of First Church of that city.

ern rest room or comfort station is needed on the beach as near the foot of Newport avenue as it can be located.

A new junior high school plant is very necessary according to school plans and census, the growth continues in the school and facilities must be provided. Let's find the best location and then start out and build it gradually.

Over at the Ocean Beach school we have wanted the tennis courts paved or cemented so that they would be more pleasant to play upon, and these facilities are not enough for those here interested in the sport. We need more courts of the same kind, also shuffle board and other recreation, for those who do not want such strenuous exercise.

If we look around just a little we will find many improvements can be made, and if we look further, we will find city authorities and government agencies looking for projects of a worthwhile and lasting nature. So let's bring the two together and get some of these things done we have wanted for the last year or two.

If you want to help Ocean Beach, the community in which you live, or perhaps make your living, take an interest in its civic affairs, help your neighbor help himself and the returns will come back to you in a very short time.

And the next meeting you should attend is next Monday night, 8 p. m. The chamber of commerce meets in the Woman's clubhouse, Newport and Abbott streets.

Fishing Piers Added To SERA Programs

San Diego county's supervisors can see the need of a fishing pier at Ocean Beach, even though our city council cannot, according to an announcement made Tuesday when recommendations were made public that had been submitted as worthwhile projects to the government if President Roosevelt's four billion dollar work relief budget is approved.

First on the program submitted is three million dollars for a civic center, the board being unanimous in this request, second in importance, it is said, is water development, including completion of Sutherland dam and the building of other dams at San Vicente and Pauma.

Other projects reported as important by the supervisors were the county's lake-to-lake drive in the mountains of the back country, development of Mission bay state park, $60,000 for fishing piers at Ocean Beach and Imperial Beach and a few millions for road improvement.

Kiwanians Work For Improved Playground

The Ocean Beach Kiwanis club in a directors' meeting held Tuesday evening resolved to make a sincere effort to have the tennis courts in the Ocean Beach school grounds cemented and a set of hand ball courts constructed.

They will request all other civic organizations of the beach to assist them in carrying out these plans which mean delightful recreation for our younger folks who it is believed do not have the proper facilities here to make the best use of their leisure time.

The city playground department will also be asked to put in a lighting system that both courts may be used in the evenings.

The present tennis court at the elementary school grounds have been inadequate for several years and besides they are not cemented, making it impossible to use them for a long time after any storms. During the present Christmas and New Year's holiday the tennis court could not be used on account of mud and sticky courts, which if they had been cemented would have been fit for use a few hours after any storm we have had so far this winter season.

On Wednesday this week SERA headquarters announced the appropriation of $1244 and work for ten men in the surfacing of the playgrounds at the Ocean Beach elementary school. This project will no doubt take care of a part of this Kiwanis program, however, they will endeavor to have installed the handball courts and the lighting of the grounds so that they may be used after dark.

News Review of Current Events the World Over

Electric Utility Interests Get Cold Shoulder From the Administration—Vast Program Reported by National Resources Board.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© by Western Newspaper Union.

ELECTRIC utility companies of the United States, worried by the power program of the New Deal, appealed to President Roosevelt to abandon the movement toward public ownership which threatens, they say, to deprive millions of security holders of their savings. The plea was presented to the President personally by Thomas N. McCarter, president of the Edison Electric Institute. That gentleman promised that the utilities would effect the reforms in financing that Mr. Roosevelt has called for, and then requested that the government join with the institute in a suit to test the constitutionality of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

In the memorial he handed to the President, Mr. McCarter gave it as his own opinion that the government in the TVA experiment is exceeding its constitutional powers and infringing the sovereign rights of the state. He cited the joint opinion of Newton D. Baker, Democrat, and James M. Beck, Republican, that TVA is unconstitutional and the "similar conclusion" of United States Judge W. I. Grubb in a recent decision.

Mr. Roosevelt turned the memorial over to Frank R. McNeich, chairman of the federal power commission, and he and his aids speedily prepared a sharp reply rejecting the proposal of co-operation in carrying the matter to the Supreme court.

"In all the history of the American people," it said, "no parallel for such a proposal can be found. . . . The call is not for the government to halt, but for the industry to catch step and move forward along progressive lines."

"The Edison Electric Institute has, of course," it continued, "a legal right to promote litigation to test the act creating the Tennessee Valley Authority or any other statute, but it will make no substantial progress toward placing the industry on a sound and permanent basis until it cleans its own house, reduces excessive rates to consumers and eliminates the malpractice and abuses which are responsible for its present condition."

Attacking McCarter's contention that rates are reasonable, Mr. McNeich said Canadians pay on an average 2.15 cents for a kilowatt hour, while Americans pay 5.2 cents. He said the Canadian figures cover public and private plants, the latter supplying "46 per cent of the consumers."

"It is the purpose of the administration," he set forth, "to narrow this excessive gap between what the consumer pays for electricity in this country and what Canada has proved it can be generated and sold for. This program does not involve either 'destructive competition or strangulation.'"

DR. HUGH S. MAGILL, president of the American Federation of Utility Investors, entered the utility controversy with a hot attack on the federal trade commission, charging that it is throwing out a smoke screen to befog the public mind in its desire to win approval for the entry of the federal government into the electric light and power business through such efforts as the Tennessee Valley Authority.

The smoke screen, he declared, was the pronouncement of the commission to the effect that public utility companies had boosted pre-depression prices in a market in which investors afterward lost millions of dollars.

"The clamor for the government to enter private enterprise," said Doctor Magill, "enjoys the sponsorship first of the Communists who have no regard for private property, second of those influenced by socialistic propaganda to believe that the production of electric power under government ownership would be in the interest of public welfare, and lastly of the spoliemen in politics who see the tremendous opportunities such a system would offer for added power and political spoils."

SENATORIAL investigators of munitions and the War department clashed when Clark of Missouri suggested, in a committee hearing, that the war mobilization plans of the department, long held secret, should be laid before congress in peace time to be debated at leisure. He held that, under the army's plan, the eight bills embodying the scheme to mobilize the nation's resources would be rushed to congress to "pass under whip and spur" without proper consideration.

War department witnesses replied that the war policies commission believed certain legislation might be held unconstitutional in peace time but legal in a war emergency.

Senator Clark also sought to learn what degree of control was contemplated by the "censorship" plan of the army. This calls for an administrator of public relations who would mobilize "all existing mediums of publicity so that they may be employed to the best possible advantage." He also would be charged with co-ordinating publicity, combating disaffection at home and enemy propaganda, "establishing rules and regulations for censorship" and "enlisting and supervising a voluntary censorship of the newspaper and periodical press."

Lieutenant Colonel C. T. Harris of the army said he never heard of a plan to license the press, and Lieut. E. E. Brannan said nothing more than voluntary censorship was contemplated.

BUSINESS leaders of the country who met in conference at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., drew up a long list of things they want the government to do or not to do, and then created a "business conference committee" that will have headquarters in Washington, and maintain "liaison" with the administration.

The conference's recommendations to the government are phrased in inoffensive language and the idea is conveyed that the business men earnestly desire to co-operate rather than criticize. The things they ask are substantially the same as those sought by the National Association of Manufacturers and the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, previously summarized in this column. The essence of it all is that government should attend more to its traditional functions and permit business to put men and capital back to work.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S national resources board, appointed last June to devise "a plan for planning," with Secretary of the Interior

Ickes as its chairman, has submitted a long report offering a program, covering 20 to 30 years, for development of land, water and resources at an expenditure of $105,000,000,000. It surveys projects which presumably include the administration's relief and public works program for the immediate future, these being:

1. Improvement of highways and the elimination of grade crossings.
2. National housing, including slum clearance, subsistence homestead, rehabilitation, and low cost housing projects.
3. Water projects, including water supply, sewage treatment, flood control, irrigation, soil erosion prevention, and hydro-electric power developments.
4. Rural electrification.

Secretary of Labor Perkins, a member of the board, has said that if its recommendations are carried out, all unemployment will be eliminated for the next 25 years. These, she says, are the results that might be expected:

1. Provide a much greater development of water resources.
2. Stop menace of floods.
3. Stop soil erosion.
4. Remove all marginal or sub-marginal lands from attempted production.
5. Stop waste of mineral resources and substitute a national policy of conservation.
6. Create great new recreational areas.
7. Assemble basic data for mapping, public finance and population, necessary for national planning with a middecennial census in 1935.
8. Co-ordinate socially-useful federal, state and municipal public works.
9. Provide for continuous long-range planning of land, water and mineral resources "in relation to each other and to the larger background of the social and economic life in which they are set."

ARMED and navy officers are concerned by the attempts of Communists to spread dissatisfaction, mutiny and rebellion among the armed forces of the nation, and have asked the house committee on un-American activities to approve a law permitting punishment of those who urge any soldier or sailor to violate his oath of allegiance.

Commander V. L. Kirkman of the navy told the committee that the Communists' campaign was planned and supervised from headquarters in New York city, and he submitted a number of pamphlets and leaflets circulated in the navy which, he said, "actually incite to mutiny, sabotage and assassination." He described how the propaganda work is carried on, good looking girls taking an active part.

IT MAY be the war in the Gran Chaco must be fought to a finish, for Paraguay has rejected the peace plan of the League of Nations which had been provisionally accepted by Bolivia. The Paraguayans, at present victorious in the jungle contest, said in their note to the league that certain conditions would make it impossible to discuss urgent matters like the return of Bolivian prisoners, "which by number and quality constitute an army very superior to that which Bolivia now has in the Chaco."

CARRYING on its anti-crime campaign, the Department of Justice caused the indictment and jailing of two attorneys on charges of complicity in the kidnaping of C. F. Urschel, Oklahoma oil magnate, in 1933. The two men represented the defendants in the kidnap trial. They are James C. Mathers of Oklahoma and Ben Laska, veteran member of the Denver bar. The men are charged specifically with handling part of the $200,000 ransom loot that went to Albert Bates, one of the actual kidnapers, who is now serving a life term at Alcatraz island prison.

Both the lawyers were released on bail, and Laska replied informally to the accusations by offering $50,000 reward to anyone who can prove that he passed any of the Urschel ransom money.

FINAL estimates of this year's crops, just released by the Department of Agriculture, show that agricultural wealth, based on farm prices December 1 of the five leading grain crops, exceeded that of last year by $314,000,000, despite the fact that total production of these crops was 1,248,000,000 bushels less than in 1933 and the smallest in 40 years.

Estimates for production of wheat, corn, oats, rye and barley total 2,541,000,000 bushels, compared with 3,789,000,000 bushels last year, and the five-year average (1927-31) of 4,000,000,000 bushels. Aggregate farm value of these crops is given as $1,894,778,000 as compared with $1,580,888,000 in 1933.

The extensive destruction of crops last summer by the heat and drought is forcibly illustrated by the fact that total production of the leading grains this year was 306,000,000 bushels smaller than the corn crop alone in 1932.

WOULD-DE lynchers of a negro youth and National Guardsmen fought desperately in Shelbyville, Tenn., and two members of the mob were killed and others wounded by bayonets and bullets. The infuriated crowd, described by a deputy sheriff as "crazy drunk," dynamited and burned the courthouse when it was learned that the negro had been disguised in militia uniform and gas mask and spirited out of town.

IF ANY doubt existed that Japan would denounce the Washington naval treaty, it was dissipated by the action of the privy council. That powerful body of statesmen, meeting with all ceremony, unanimously recommended abrogation of the pact to Emperor Hirohito, whose speedy approval was expected.

Baron Kichiro Hirayama, vice president of the council, read the report to the emperor and afterward said to the press: "The imperial government desires continuation of clauses of the Washington treaty relating to limitation of fortifications and naval bases in the Pacific ocean, but, if such clauses are terminated, the government is prepared to cope with the situation."

In plain words, then, Japan wants equality on the high seas with the United States and Great Britain, but wants the United States to remain restricted as to its Pacific ocean defenses.

SECRETARY OF WAR DERN is no less insistent on the necessity of strengthening the army than is Secretary of the Navy Swanson in the case of our naval defenses.

In the first section of his annual report Mr. Dern asks that the officer and enlisted strength of the army be increased to 14,000 commissioned officers and 165,000 enlisted men. Other recommendations include:

Purchase of 600 airplanes over a period of three years to give the air corps 2,320 serviceable planes, as urged by the board headed by Newton D. Baker, which investigated the air corps and its needs.

Allocation of sufficient funds to complete the army housing program at home and abroad.

Construction without undue delay of a war department building to house all its activities under one roof instead of in 17 buildings, as at present.

Enactment by congress of legislation to improve the promotion system, so as to give a more uniform and satisfactory flow of promotion without necessitating heavy additional expense.

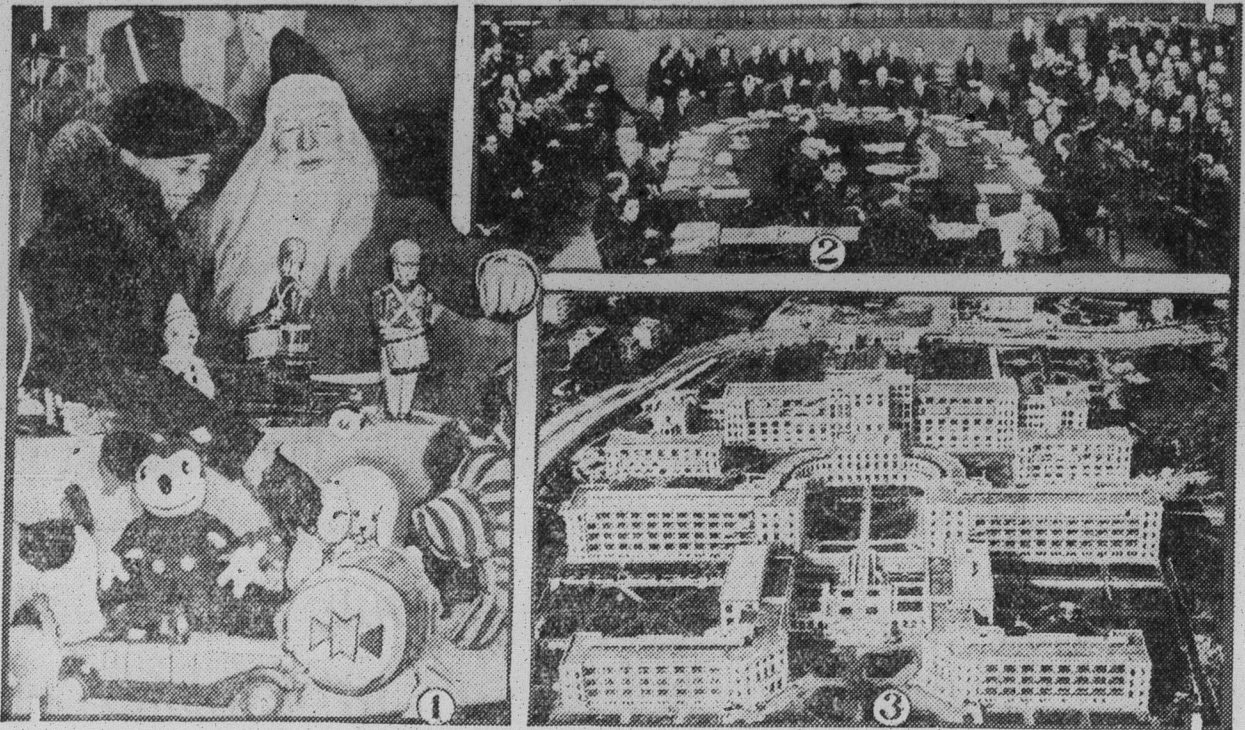

Increasing the pay of officers, particularly in the lower grades, when the condition of the treasury warrants.

Mr. Dern praised highly the efficiency and morale of the regular army, the National Guard and the organized reserves, and defended the work of the air corps in its brief operation of the air mail service last winter.

Mrs. MARY HARRIMAN RUMSEY, who fought valiantly but not altogether successfully to protect the interests of the consumers against the contentions of industry and labor, is dead in Washington. Always interested in sociology and public affairs, this daughter of E. H. Harriman and inheritor of some of his millions took an active part in promoting the New Deal and was made head of the National Consumers' board of the NRA.

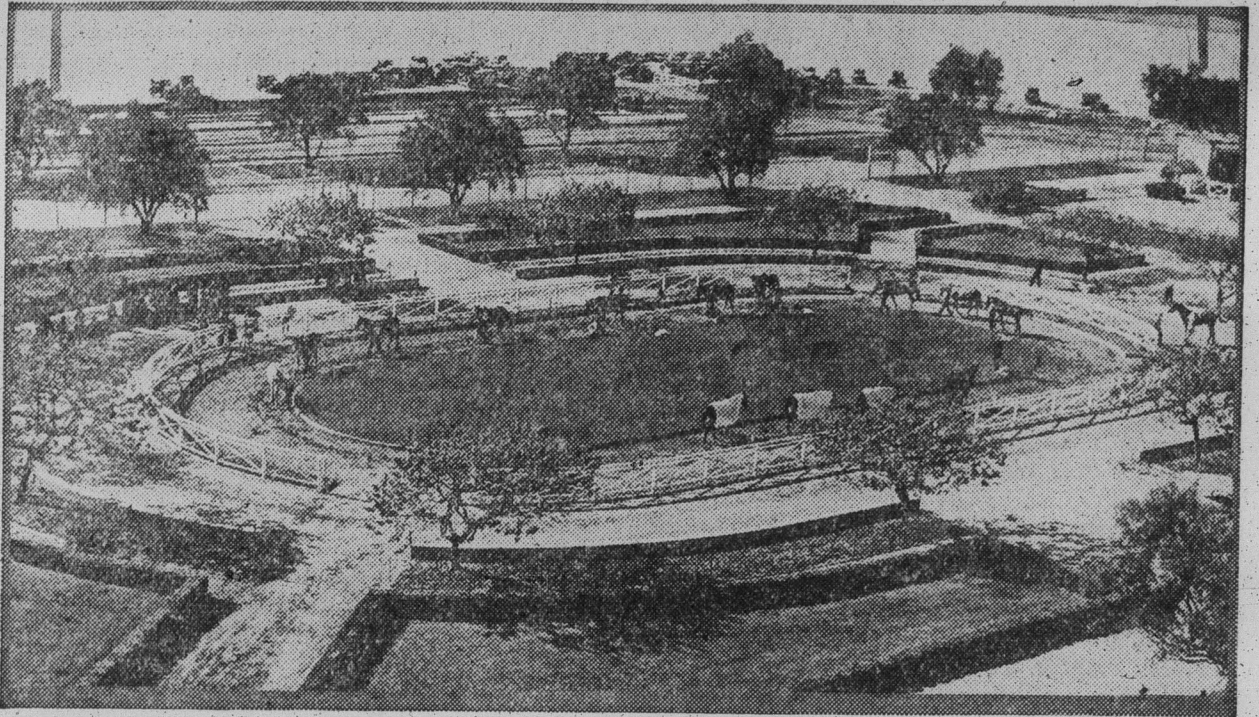

Two men of note who died were Eugene R. Black, former governor of the federal reserve board, and Martin W. Littleton, New York lawyer, who appeared in many sensational cases and for a time served as congressman.

An order requiring all New York policemen and police patrolwomen to report for target practice once every three weeks, at the precinct headquarters to which they are attached, indicates that the time is not far off when they will be armed while on duty with revolvers of at least 32 caliber. ### Anti-Twin Insurance High

While there are many who wish insurance against the birth of twins, the rate is so high that few policies are issued, according to an insurance agency at Durban, Natal. An average of two inquiries a month regarding such policies are received. The rates vary from 2½ per cent to 50 per cent depending upon the history of the family for 100 years. If triplets are born, the insurance company pays double. As most of the inquiries are from persons whose families have long "twin history" they usually find the premium too high.

Measuring solar radiation is highly intricate work. ## Let Our Motto Be GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. LLOYD ARNOLD
Professor of Bacteriology and Preventive
Medicine, University of Illinois,
College of Medicine.

WINTER VACATIONS

From a health viewpoint the ideal time for a vacation is during February and March.

In the north temperate states until the last 20 to 25 years, it used to be that the summer months were the period of greatest health risk. We had continual typhoid, fever outbreaks then, and there were a multitude of diarrhea complaints. But now, due to more sanitary water systems, to inspection of cattle and to pasteurization of milk, to better understanding of quarantine, and to our greater knowledge of diet and proper care of foods, we do not have so many summer illnesses. We still have much work to do to correct the summer diarrheas among infants, but on the whole we have made great headway in the prevention of food and water borne diseases.

In the matter of such winter illnesses as colds, influenza, bronchitis, and pneumonia, however, we are still pretty much at bay. These now have higher death rates than the strictly summer diseases.

So that, so far as health is concerned, the winter months are now our disabling months. It is at this time, rather than in summer, that we should have our yearly periods of quest of sunshine and recreation and rest.

Our industrial life is so spaced, though, that not many of us can leave our jobs in February and March. And if we can, then what about the children? They need hours of sunshine, too, and there are no school vacation weeks in winter except at the festive Christmas time, when all life centers in the home.

But is it necessary that our industrial activities run at full speed during the dark cold winter months, and have curtailed output during the summer months when the worker can get all the sunshine he requires, before and after office and factory hours, and on Saturdays and Sundays? Force of habit has made it so, but need it continue? Might it not be possible also to revise our school schedules so that there could be vacation periods in the winter months? Modern air-conditioning would make it possible to have both factories and schools run in the hottest days without discomfort.

The questions may seem far-fetched, but it is not outside the realm of probability that we may change our habits of thought so that we will make our vacations correspond to our health needs.

It is true that November and December are usually dark months, but it is also true that the peak of colds, sore throats, bronchitis and pneumonia comes in the late winter months. This means that the stored up sunshine which we managed to accumulate during the summer and fall months has been sufficient to carry us through the early winter. But by January our resistance to disease starts getting real knocks, and the weak easily succumb. Economically it need not cost any more to take a winter vacation than a summer vacation. If one wants to go South, trains offer vacation rates. Fashionable hotels are high, but fashionable hotels are always high, and why be fashionable? It does not cost any more to run the family automobile on a winter trip through the South than on a summer trip through the North, and tourist camps are good and cheap everywhere.

For those who do not want southern sunshine there are many resorts in the North now that offer winter sports and roaring fireplaces to gather around.

The point is that in the late winter, when we have used up our stock of stored summer sunshine, and storms and cold spells take toll of our vitality, and we have had the strain of months of full productive work, beginning before daylight and extending until after dark in the short winter days, our bodies have their period of greatest physiological exhaustion. That is the time we should give them rest.

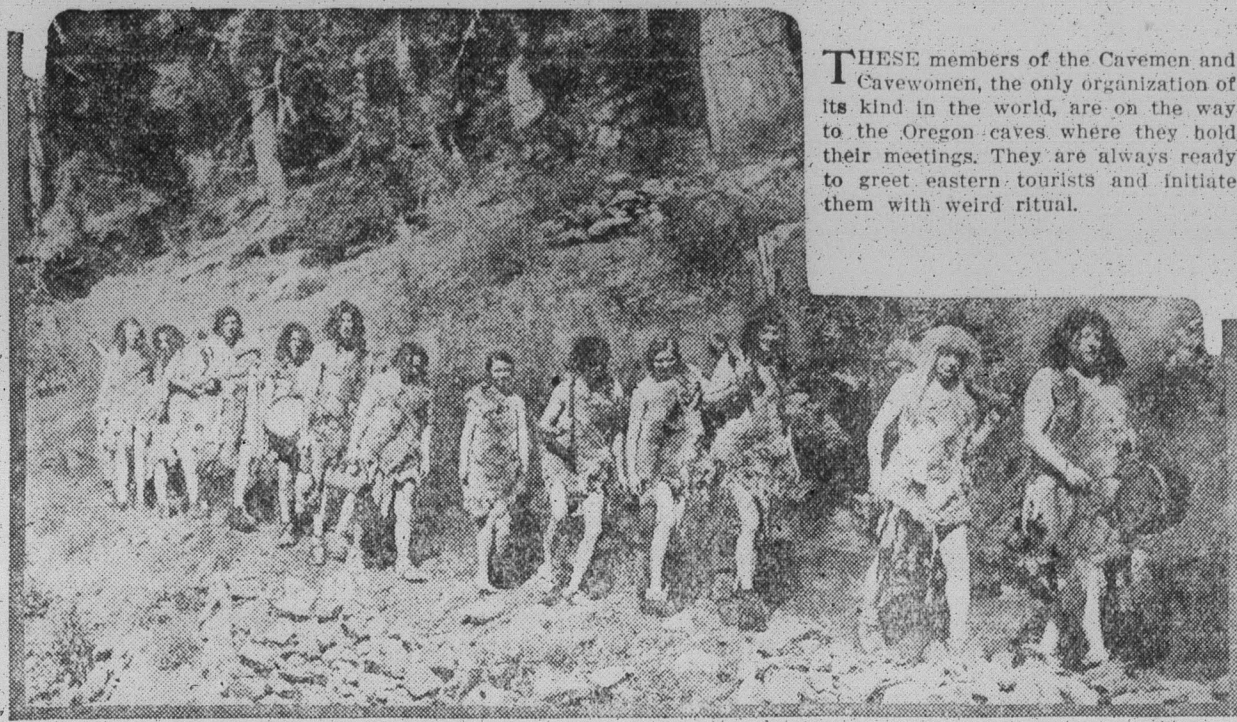

Also it is the time when human beings, instead of being herded together, should spread apart. Cold germs are contracted by getting our noses too close together.

In a packed factory or office or school room, or in a church or movie or social gathering, our noses seem to collect droplets from other people's noses. And if we were riding out on an open highway, or diving in the Gulf of Mexico, or skiing down a long snow slope, we should have a chance to get away from such of our fellow citizens as are infected with colds.

But meantime while we are waiting for this happy day when our industrial and school habits will have changed to accord with our present day health needs, get out into as much winter sunshine as you can. A research worker in the University of Illinois, Dr. Irwin Spiesman, who has made a thorough study of colds, says that every one, except house-bound invalids, should be out in the open air at least an hour every day, regardless of what the weather is. That changing from indoor temperature helps build resistance against colds. It tones up the system and it's a tonic within the reach of every one.

YANK YANK EXPLAINS SOME THINGS

WHEN Yank Yank the Nuthatch asked Peter Rabbit if there was anything else he wanted to know, Peter was quite ready for him. "Yes," he retorted promptly. "I want to know how it is that you can walk head first down the trunk of a tree without losing your balance and tumbling off."

Yank Yank chuckled happily. "I discovered a long time ago," he replied, "that the people who get on best in this world are those who make the most of what they have and waste no time wishing they had what other people have. I suppose you have noticed that all the Woodpecker family have stiff tail feathers and use them to brace themselves when they are climbing a tree. They have become so dependent upon them that they don't dare move about on the trunk of a tree without using them. If they want to come down a tree they have to back down."

"Now, Old Mother Nature didn't give me a stiff tail but she gave me a very good pair of feet with three toes in front and one behind and when I was a very little fellow I learned to make the most of those feet. Each foot hooks into the bark. When I come down a tree I simply twist one foot around so that the three front claws of this foot keep me from falling. It too has a sharp claw. When I go up a tree the three front claws on each is just as easy for me to go down a tree as to go up and I can go right around the trunk quite as easily and comfortably." Suiting action to the word, Yank Yank ran around the trunk of the apple tree just above Peter's head. When he reappeared Peter had another question ready.

"I Should Say Not," Exclaimed Yank Yank.

"Do you live altogether on insects and worms and grubs and their eggs?" he asked.

"I should say not," exclaimed Yank Yank. "I like acorns and beechnuts and certain kinds of seeds."

"I don't see how such a little fellow as you can eat such hard things as acorns and beechnuts," protested Peter a little doubtfully.

Yank Yank laughed right out. "Some time when I see you over in the Green Forest I'll show you," said he. "When I find a fat beechnut I take it to a little crack in a tree which will just hold it. Then with this stout bill of mine I crack the shell. It really is quite easy when you know how. Cracking a nut open that way is sometimes called hatching and that is how I come by the name of Nuthatch."

Probabilities Never Wrong

The quotation from Aristotle to the effect that probabilities are never wrong is a translation of the Greek which is practically as follows: "In regard to the confirmation of evidence and the law of probabilities, when a man has no witnesses he can say that the decision should be given in accordance with probabilities and that this is the meaning of the oath according to the best of one's judgment. For... probabilities cannot be bribed to deceive and neither can they be convicted of bearing false witness."

IN MEMORY OF GEORGIA

By ANNE CAMPBELL

ALWAYS I will remember her strong hands
Poised like white birds on the piano keys.
Bringing our spirits to enchanted lands.
Winding us 'round with heaven's harmonies.
Not only with her music did she touch
Our hearts with beauty, but her life was such
That art and character were joined,
and she
Was music—an eternal melody.

It is as if an uncompleted chord
Of music stopped when she set forth to find
Celestial harmonies as a reward
For all the loveliness she left behind.
This world held charms for her...
but how much more
Will she discover on that golden shore,
When she begins that last triumphant strain—
Commemorating her release from pain!

POT HOLDER SET IN THREE PIECES

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK

Pot holders are necessary in the kitchen, and it's just as easy to make an attractive pot holder as a plain one. They are interesting and easy to make, in spare time, and some should always be worked up ready to take, as a gift when a trifle is wanted in a hurry and you know it will be appreciated.

Package No. A-8 is composed of three pieces. Two pot holders and one container. When made up, the holder is visible through door, as shown above. The holders are placed in pocket through top opening. The material is stamped and stenciled in colors, ready to be made up, and the lines may be outlined if desired. Directions are also given how to put it together.

Odd Nickname Saddled on Unfortunate Girl

The dinner table discussion centered upon odd names and the complications they cause, after some one had told the story of the German ship's steward who accused the United States of having had a President born of a race for whom present-day Germans admit no affection whatsoever.

Possibly you haven't heard the story of the ship's steward. He was very insistent. And when he was finally challenged to name his man he offered Lincoln. "Cause why? Because Lincoln was named 'Abraham'." Other names and their odd involvements leaped from every dinner plate then. But the best one came from the corporation lawyer. He has been all around and was, naturally, the lad to put on the cap-sheaf. The name he offered belongs to a pleasant, and, according to his serious declaration, white girl in the Middle West somewhere.

"Her nickname," he said, "was Proky. Now guess what her full name was."

No one could, of course, guess, so finally he told.

"She had something to do with Lincoln, too," he explained. "She had been born in the '60s and her folks, named Cogshell, called her 'Emancipation Proclamation.'"—New York Sun.

QUESTION BOX by ED WYNN, The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

Can you tell me the origin of the custom of hanging paintings on walls?

Yours truly,

ART STUDENT.

Answer: In 612 B. C., there ruled in Egypt a very vain king. He heard of an artist who could paint his picture on canvas. The king wishing to leave behind him, his likeness, ordered the artist to paint his picture. When it was completed the king did not like the painting. He sent his soldiers out to catch the artist but they couldn't find him so the king hung the painting.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I have my laundry work done at a Chinese laundry. I went there yesterday and was talking to one of the laundry men about his native country. He told me of the earthquakes and floods they have there. He said that after the last earthquake in China the city of Hong-Kong looked just like "h-l." Do you believe that?

Yours truly,

N. QUITATIVE.

Answer: Well, some Chinamen have been in a lot of places.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I have a very dear friend who has been acting strangely ever since his wife ran away with an engineer of a railroad train. Now, every time he hears a train whistle he gets nervous and runs away and hides himself. What do you think is wrong with him?

Sincerely,

G. WHIZ.

Answer: It is only natural that he should run away. An engineer stole his wife and ran away on a train with her and now when he hears a whistle he hides. Very simple. He's afraid the engineer is bringing his wife back.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

Can you tell me what is meant when people say a certain married couple are "unspeakably happy"?

Yours,

O. HIGHO.

Answer: When a married couple are referred to as being "unspeakably happy" it means that they are deaf and dumb.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I have been ill for several months and my physician wants to send me to the milk cure in Afghanistan. Please tell me, "Is the milk good there?"

Sincerely,

THE CHILD'S MIND AND OURS

THE child's mind is as complex as the adult's.

That pronouncement came out at the recent meeting of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene. Dr. James S. Plant, director of the Newark (N. J.) Juvenile Clinic told the assembled doctors psychiatry has just learned that the child mind is no simpler to understand than the adult mind, and that their failure to realize this may be responsible for the appalling number of delinquent and maladjusted children.

Well—we shouldn't be surprised. Only, what a pity that the experts in this field didn't long ago consult a few ordinary mothers, or some teachers who knew their jobs. Had they even paged enough imagination to recall their own childhood, they need not

GETTING A NEW GRIP

The New Year starts off with far greater prospects of success than it did a year ago. Sane thinking is leavening the lump—the obstacle that was a severe handicap in 1933—and we are better equipped for a safer voyage with the ship of state while sailing the sea of destiny. There are reasons to believe that a spirit of optimism is in the air. We have withstood the vicissitudes of depression until we are satisfied to build our hope from the plane of circumstances; even a willingness to begin over again.

The United States had 46 citizens with incomes of $1,000,000 in 1933, against only 20 citizens as prosperous in 1932. Internal revenue statistics for last year show increases in all the income classes ranging upward from $25,000, but decreases in the lower income groups. The total number filing income statements declined 2.67 per cent; total of incomes shrunk 3.04 per cent. Financially speaking, those 46 multi-millionaires suffered very heavily—they had $81,000,000 flowing in and the needy Government took $25,000,000 of it away.

The "poor man" may take courage, for he is not the only one who must cautiously steer his bark from the reefs and shoals of poverty. He is better off than ever he realized. He can count his blessings with rejoicing and should feel content that there is a world of possibilities awaiting him. Beginning over again is human ambition for you cannot keep the wise and lowly in the gutter very long at a time.

Clean, truthful advertising pays big results.

Practically the whole of Europe is assuming quite an overplus of interest about a little basin of country, 728 square miles with a population of 770,000, and next Sunday, January 13, a plebiscite will be held to determine whether it is to become a part of France or Germany, or remain a ward of the League of Nations, who have lathered the little possession since 1919. Saar Valley is a coveted piece of territory, formerly a part of Germany, because of its large coal mines and rare deposits. France demanded this territory at the peace conference, in return for the wrecked mines at Lens and other destructions. Under a compromise plan, it was created a separate state, to be ruled by the League of Nations until 1935, when the inhabitants would decide by a plebiscite whether to remain under the League, or to be united with France or Germany. It is one of the European burning issues and this election is liable to cause severe trouble and bloodshed.

President Roosevelt is reported to be in sound health. This is not taken as "perfect health," but it must be the nearest approach to it. Few men seem to value health like the President. Like the Chinese custom, he employs a physician to keep him well instead of waiting until he is sick or indisposed and then call in his doctor to heal him, like most of the American people do. Very few of the past presidents of the United States were sickly during their term in the executive chair. Theodore Roosevelt, although when a young man was considered an invalid, was able to regain his health, and while president, his physical condition was considered robust and with his hard work in office, demonstrated his powerful strength, backed by a good body and alert mind. This is a good report especially for a president, for it is hard to preside over an imperfect government and not suffer some taint of body and character.

One of the greatest successes achieved to go down in history is the casting operations of the mammoth 200-inch telescope lens for the California observatory to be erected on Mt. Palomar. Undoubtedly, it is the greatest triumph of its kind ever known to modern mechanics. The first lens, cast last March, suffered from a mishap, although it is being finished for use. The new glass, after months of cooling, will become a reflecting mirror in the greatest telescope ever built. It will enable men to survey "island universes" 900,000,000 miles away, three times the scope of the present 100-inch glass at Mt. Wilson. The lens of this great achievement when completed will be a million times as powerful as the human eye.

California's recent grape crop was a humdinger for the growers. Thousands of vineyardists are rejoicing over the returns which indicate that over $34,000,000 were realized. This is seven million more than last year. Two years ago the crop was $14,000,000 below 1934 figures. California reaps a good reward, which gives encouragement to conditions throughout the state. Since the 1932 record was the low point in a drop from $83,130,000 in 1930, the Government's official review concluded that returns for 1934 established a definite trend back into profitable production again, with a promise of better times in general.

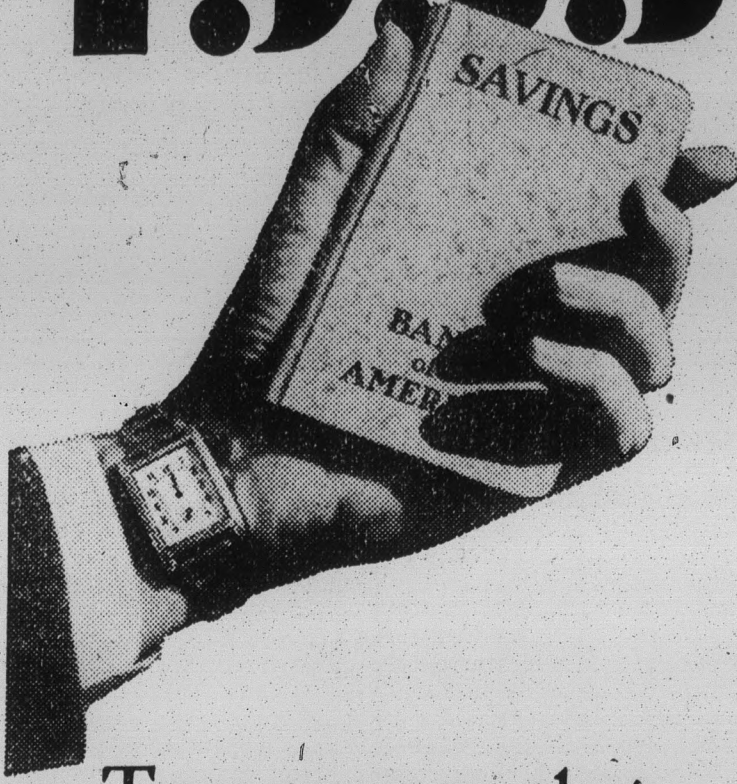

The Repeal's first year has past, and what is now uppermost in the average mind: Are we any better off? The age-old warfare between liquor and society seems to be no better than a constant crusade—worse if anything. When the Eighteenth Amendment was adopted, the fight began. It gave the country at large a basis for downing old Johnbarleycorn. It was the greatest enemy of the saloon, but declared a "national disgrace," so the vote was taken and the "ayes have it." Thus the Repeal. Now we wonder if it has't been a greater disappointment to the country at large!

The world at large is making fine strides. Maybe a lot are war-minded but the League of Nations Council is hard at work, trying to take the profit out of war, and when they do, there will be an end to hostilities. Even the European crisis will see the dove of peace flying with the olive branch.

This is the year to let by-gones be by-gones and start out with a full breast of determination, erect and level-headed. There is psychology in such a decision and the movement is strangely contagious.

Ed Hastings Made Head
County Supervisors

Monday morning saw considerable change in personnel of San Diego County's board of supervisors.

The News is pleased to see Ed Hastings elected chairman of the board for he lives on Point Loma and has a genuine interest in every activity in our county. Mr. Hastings is a native son and has a thorough understanding of the problems confronting the people in every section of our county as well as other problems of the adjoining counties in this section of the state.

The old board of supervisors spent the morning hurrying thru a routine calendar of business and at noon Tom Hurley, for 12 years a member of the board and for two years its chairman, brought down his gavel and adjourned the meeting.

Harvey Hicks took the seat of S. P. McMullen, who had left in the middle of the morning, and B. A. Sweet took the seat of Hurley. Supervisor Richards nominated Hastings for chairman of the board. He was elected unanimously and Hurley handed him the gavel, bade board members farewell, gathered up floral contributions of courthouse friends and left for his home at Oceanside. He will spend several months contacting boards of supervisors urging them to send exhibits to the San Diego exposition.

In a surprise move the new board of supervisors appointed County Auditor Chauncey R. Hammond and County Surveyor Ernest R. Childs to succeed themselves.

District Attorney Thomas Whelan appeared before the board at the opening of its afternoon session Monday to announce that neither of the offices could function nor perform any official act without duly appointed heads, that the elective terms of Hammond and Childs had expired, and that until successors were named the offices were to all intents and purposes vacant. Any act by persons attempting to hold over might be subject to attack, he said.

Supervisor B. A. Sweet, new member who had announced that he favored changes in both offices, asked if temporary appointments could be made. Whelan said that the charter provides that persons appointed remain in office until removed by a four-fifths vote of the board.

Edgar F. Hastings, new chairman of the board, said he thought the charter was a bit unfair; it did not give the board time to confer. Whelan said that the board knew who its members would be immediately after the November election, and that in the intervening two months there was ample time to make selections.

When the board reconvened Hastings proposed that Childs and Hammond be appointed pending hearings. It was agreed that if a majority of the board should unite on other applicants all five members would vote for removal of Childs and Hammond so that the other appointment might be made.

When the board reconvened in the afternoon, the members came out of a conference room where they had spent about 15 minutes. Each had a typewritten list of committee appointments worked out at several conferences. They were made without a dissenting vote, as follows:

Courthouse and grounds, Hastings; county garage, Richards; publicity, Hicks; county library, Sweet; industrial road camp, Sweet; forest fires, Trussell; planning commission, Trussell; Edgemoor farm, Trussell; county hospital, Hicks; health department, Richards.

The term of Eugene Daney as law library trustee had expired and Chairman Hastings said that Daney had consented to serve again. Sweet however, thought best to delay appointment until he could consult Daney.

There was a vacancy in the county health board, but inquiry revealed that no one knows whose term expires, because members of the health board never have drawn lots to see who gets the short term. As soon as the health board pulls its slips out of somebody's hat, the board will know who should be re-appointed or succeeded.

The Loman Reporter

(POINT LOMA HIGH SCHOOL)

School re-opened at Point Loma high last Monday morning, January 7th with most of the students and faculty in their accustomed places, with fifteen newcomers, among the regulars, with the building considerably redecorated, and with only four weeks in which to wind up the first semester's work.

PLHS

One of the charming social affairs of the vacation was a breakfast at the home of Miss Ethyl Henderson in honor of the Alumni Campfire girls. Twenty-seven guests were present with Miss Edith Kempthorne honor guest. Miss Kempthorne spent her holidays at La Jolla.

PLHS

Miss Ruth Henry reports a delightful time among authors' manuscripts and first editions in the Huntington library. She found Conrad's manuscript of Nostromo, Stevenson's of Kidnapped, and Galsworthy's of The Freelanders especially interesting and the first editions of Twain's Huckleberry Finn, Melville's Moby Dick, and Stowe's Uncle Tom's Cabin equally so.

PLHS

Since Mr. Christianson is convalescing so safely we may venture to disclose the new cult which has been started with great secrecy and considerable attempt at selectness at Point Loma high among the men of the faculty. Only a jolly foursome has as yet been admitted to the highly select ranks of The Appendix Club: Messrs. A. B. Crawford, G. W. Banks, G. P. Farrar and Kenneth Christianson.

PLHS

Miss Jean McPhee will not return to her work in Spanish at Point Loma high for several weeks on account of illness. She has spent her vacation in Loma Linda hospital where Miss Ruth Hall called to see her before returning home after vacationing up the coast. Kenneth Christianson is missed from the commercial department but is expected back very shortly. He too has spent his vacation in a hospital and is now convalescing at 175 E Pearl street, Pomona, after an appendectomy.

PLHS

Several members of the faculty took to the back country rather than to the upcoast allurements. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Doyle spent their vacation at Descanso, and Paul C. Johnson trapped skunks near Warner Hot springs and hiked to the Indian Reservation. All in all whether they ranged or slept the vacation away with test papers safely pressed under the mattress, as Emory Shepherd did, the faculty have returned with vim and vigor to the task of closing a semester's work in four record weeks.

PLHS

Two students from Point Loma during the Christmas recess took the examinations for Freshman scholarships in Pomona college next fall: Mary Shreve and Robert Diamond. There are twenty-two such scholarships available to the best qualified out of one hundred ten selected students who took these examinations simultaneously. In the one hundred ten, four were from the San Diego school system, two of them from Point Loma high. The announcement of winners will be made February fifteenth. We wait the results with interest, Mary and Bob.

PLHS

The executives of Point Loma high in manipulating the room and class situation for the second semester master sheet have demonstrated their ability to qualify for advanced work in professional chess playing. Cross word puzzles are far too puerile for their skill.

PLHS

Wanted! Some kindly soul with a flair for managing and a gift for raising sums of money with silent ease! It is a shame to see entertainment, stage setting after stage setting come and go at Point Loma high with no visual record in the form of good photographs. The Christmas play has a curtain, settings, and church windows that are unique. There should be pictures taken of every such stage and art project of importance so that a book of views could be compiled as a visual history of the school's achievement in the arts.

118 PEOPLE EMPLOYED AT GOODWILL IN DECEMBER

Thirty-nine persons are being employed daily at the plant of the San Diego county Goodwill Industries, reports Supt. Myron Insko, this number constituting a new high record. Other new records named in the same report are found in the number of hours of employment—given—7553—and the amount expended in cash wages, the latter being 129 per cent in excess of similar expenditure a year ago, as compared with an increase in cash receipts from the Goodwill store of 122 per cent in the same period.

Although 118 different persons found honest labor as a means of relief at the Goodwill Industries during the past month, not all applicants could be accommodated and about eight, chiefly men, were turned away daily, he reports. More discarded articles sent to Goodwill will permit the employment of more workers. Unskilled laborers are employed in preparing newspapers for shipment, but there has been, and always is at this period of the year, a considerable falling off of the quantity of papers contributed.

lor, Mrs. Ruby Johnson, and Miss Frances Henking saw the Rose tournament. Miss Ina Shafer saw both the tournament and the Alabama-Stanford game, she pronounced the game the finest she has seen in California. Mrs. Hilda Giles saw the tournament, the game and the Huntington gallery.

Village of Midgets To Be At Exposition

A community of one of Nature's strange contrasts in human beings—midgets—will be an attraction of exceptional interest at the California Pacific International Exposition which opens in San Diego, May 29. Midget City and Midget Farm are being built almost to the scale of doll houses for the convenience of the diminutive folk who will compose its population. Among the more than 100 residents of the community will be dancers, singers and other artists who will exhibit their talents for the entertainment of exposition visitors.

Features of Midget City will be a hotel, restaurant, butcher shop, grocery and park, and the world's smallest newspaper, The Midget City News.

Among the group is perhaps the most famous adult midgets in the world. They are Captain Werner, of Germany, and Margaret Ann Robinson, a Californian. The former is 18 inches tall, weighs 19 pounds and is 22 years old, while Margaret is 19 inches in height, weighs 18 pounds and is 18 years old.

Word precedes them from Chicago, where they were featured at the Century of Progress, that the captain and Margaret are engaged, and that their wedding at Midget City may be expected to highlight the social season on California Pacific International Exposition's Midway.

SERVE SIMPLE FOODS IN NEW APPETIZING WAYS

Have you one of those holiday hang-overs? Not the alcoholic kind, but a sort of "Even if it's good, I wouldn't like it" attitude toward food.

Whether you have or not, it's reasonably safe to bet that the other members of the family are thus afflicted. The answer, of course, is that too many rich foods always prove their own undoing. Appetites automatically put on the brakes.

And when that happens, according to Julia Lee Wright, director of the Homemakers' Bureau of Safeway Stores, it's time for the old-fashioned simple foods. Split-peas, lentils, beans, and rice become the order of the day.

"Besides being good cookery," says Mrs. Wright, in a national magazine article, "these simple foods are also sound economy." Rice, in particular, is one of the few foods now selling below its price at this time last year.

"If your family insists on something new," she continued, "you can give them a pleasant surprise by serving some of the combinations which have been discovered recently, or by reviving the old favorites long forgotten in the modern shuffle. The names themselves are interesting, such as 'Hopping John'—a memorable dish of black-eyed beans and rice; 'Porcupine Meat Balls'—so named because the rice, in cooking, pops out of the meat in much the same fashion as a porcupine's quills; 'Bean Cheese Roast'—a dish which even experts can rarely tell from meat loaf, and many other main courses which will help to awaken those jaded appetites."

Mrs. Wright is said to have received thousand of requests for recipes for these items as a result of the magazine article. Extra girls have been employed at the Oakland, California, headquarters of the Homemakers' Bureau in order to handle the rush.

FARM AND LIVESTOCK INCOME ADVANCING

Based on estimated yields and prices prevailing November 1, California's income during 1934 from agricultural crops livestock, and livestock products will total $434,056,000, as compared with $402,395,000 for 1933, and $371,956,000 for 1932, according to a report issued by the Research department of the California State chamber of commerce.

The 1934 estimated total is an increase of 7.9 per cent over the previous year's farm income, and a gain of 16.7 per cent over 1932. However, farm income still remains 26 per cent below the annual average, for the past eight years, of $586,905,000.

The agricultural outlook for the coming season has been greatly improved by the mild temperatures and the widespread rains, which have been of material benefit to growers of winter and spring crops. The condition of livestock has improved greatly as a result of new grazing, increased stock water supplies, and favorable weather.

OCEAN BEACH POST NO. 433 and AUXILIARY

Ocean Beach post No. 433, the American Legion, will hold its annual card party and entertainment at the Woman's clubhouse, Friday evening, Jan. 18. It first was announced that the party would be held on Wednesday, Jan. 16, but the hall could not be had on that night.

Legionnaires, auxiliary members and the public is cordially invited to attend. One of the entertainment features of the evening will be the famous 40 and Eight Dutch band. It is an organization within an organization. The 40 and Eight is the honorary and play degree of the American Legion—or the Shrine of the World war veterans organization.

Aside from the Dutch band, there will be other entertainment. Cards will be enjoyed from 9 to 11, when a buffet luncheon will be served by the auxiliary. There will be prizes for the door, high and low bridge and 500 scores, and there will be a new game to many folk, but not to the navy men who attend. Backgammon, or acey ducy is the game that a number of old-timers of the navy enjoy.

Ralph Chadwick, commander of the Ocean Beach post, announces that this party is planned to be the largest and best in the history of the post, and he is anxious that all come and enjoy the entertainment and specialties which have been arranged.

The date, again, January 18; the place the Ocean Beach Woman's clubhouse.

STEINKE STAMPS MAN MOUNTAIN FREAK

In a heated verbal battle, ended by special police at the Olympic auditorium, Hans Steinke, giant Teuton wrestler, hurled his ideas at the Man Mountain. "Give me a match and I'll eliminate you from the ring for all time," said Steinke. "You have injured more men in wrestling than any other two men. Your reign is about to come to a close."

Dean invited Steinke to put up $5000.00 for the match and agreed to meet him the first open date he had, but added that he was booked up till next August. Deans statement was met with the desire, on the part of Steinke, to wrestle it out at the time, without any spectators present.

Lou Dare, Tom Pacts of St. Louis, Ed White of Chicago and Paul Bowser of Boston are seeking to match this pair. Linn Platner of the San Diego coliseum would like to have the match but realizes that it is not within reach of San Diego. Platner added that by the time the two got through their demands, they would want more money than he could draw with a packed house.

Wrestling in San Diego is going over big. The last four shows have turned away hundreds of fans unable to gain admission to the arena. Great programs with the world's greatest heavyweights competing and a policy of sparing no expense in making up the programs has made wrestling San Diego's greatest sport event.

THE CHRISTOS LEGEND AND ITS SYMBOLOGY

The essential meaning of the Christ-story is the living Christ within you, born anew at every time a man surrenders to his spiritual Self—to the god within him. Then is the Christ born anew. George Simpson will be the speaker at the meeting of the Ocean Beach Theosophical club on Thursday evening, January 17th at 7:30 in the bungalow of the school and will dwell upon the esoteric interpretation of the Christmas season. All are welcome and questions are desired.

CHURCHES OF CHRIST, SCIENTIST

Communion services will be conducted on Sunday in all Christian Science churches, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass. The subject of the Lesson-Sermon is "Sacrament." These words of Jesus are the Golden Text: "A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another. By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another." One of the Scriptural selections in the Lesson-Sermon includes these verses from I John: "My little children, let us not love in word, neither in tongue; but in deed and in truth. And hereby we know that we are of the truth, and shall assure our hearts before him."

Correlative passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, cite the words: "When will Jesus' professed followers learn to emulate him in all his ways and to imitate his mighty works?" "Our heavenly Father, divine Love, demands that all men should follow the example of our Master and his apostles and not merely worship his personality."

Our Weekly Bible Lesson.

THE BLESSED LIFE.

(From The Sermon on the Mount—The Book of Matthew.) (Matthew 5. 1-9)

And seeing the multitudes he went up into a mountain: and when he was set, his disciples came unto him: 2: And he opened his mouth, and taught them, saying, 3. Blessed are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. 4. Blessed are they that mourn: for they shall be comforted. 5. Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth. 6. Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled. 7. Blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy. 8. Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God. 9. Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God.

BAPTIST CHURCH SERVICES OCEAN BEACH SCHOOL

"Divine Companionship" will be the subject of the sermon at 11 a.m. Rev. W. S. Dunn the pastor will preach, and the choir will render special music.

At 7:30 p.m. there will be a song service and the pastor will preach on the subject "The Value of a Man".

The Bible school sessions begin at 9:45 a.m. and the Young People's society meets at 6:45 p.m. The services of this church are open to all and you will receive a cordial welcome.

THE THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY: POINT LOMA

At Theosophical Headquarters, Point Loma, on Sunday afternoon, January 13th, the subject of the forum-lecture will be "Some Mysteries of Consciousness." This will be presented by Ernest J. Dadd of the literary staff of Theosophical University. Assisting Mr. Dadd in the answering of questions will be his wife, Mrs. Frances M. Dadd, also active in literary work, Point Loma.

Mr. Dadd came to Theosophical headquarters from Australia in 1920, and has been manager of the printing department of Theosophical University Press since that time, under the direction of both Katherine Tingley and her successor, G. de Purucker.

Mrs. Dadd is associate-editor of "Lucifer", official organ of the Theosophical club, and well-known as a lecturer on Theosophical subjects.

Mr. Dadd says: "There is no greater need among us at the present time than a better understanding of the mysteries of our own consciousness. The complexities of modern life make it imperative that we should be able to maintain our equanimity in the face of the uncertainty which surrounds us today. That poise of character can only be attained by some degree of self-knowledge, and this Theosophy is able to give."

Lutheran Mission

"The Boy Jesus Among The Doctors of The Law" will be the subject of the sermon to be delivered by Geo. M. Jacobsen, vicar in charge of the Ocean Beach Lutheran Mission, in the 10:45 o'clock service. In this story of Jesus we find important truths that every child, young person, parent, and adult should know. Come and hear these important truths.

The Sunday School lesson for this Sunday, is "The Twelve-Year-Old Jesus in the Temple." That Jesus was always about His heavenly Father's business, and that He was obedient to Him and His parents, are the thoughts which will be brought out. Send the children so that they might learn how and why they ought to respect their parents and elders, even as Jesus did.

A cordial invitation is extended to all Lutherans and the general public to attend these services.

NINETEEN NEW PUPILS ENTER OCEAN BEACH SCHOOL

On January 7th, 1935, 19 new pupils enrolled in the Ocean Beach school. A great many of them came from out of the state. They are as follows:

Jean Marie Hubble came from Florence school; Dale Sedlak, formerly of La Jolla elementary school entered L3 grade; Charles Brown, L6, came to us from Washington school. Three children came from San Ysidro, California. They are Rudolph Tessada, Frank Tessada, and Muriel Brent, Zella B. Childs entered L3 from National City. Theao and June Austin enrolled in Ocean Beach after having attended a private school in San Diego. Madeline, Jean and Robert King of Denver, Colorado, enrolled in L3, L4 and H6 respectively. Doree Gregory, H3, came from Caryville, Arkansas, and Terry Gilman came from Sonoma County, California.

Miss Neal enrolled Carolyn Londahl in her class. She came from Bremerton, Washington. Frances Surak of Lancaster, Penn., is now in H4 and Virginia and Freda Hall entered the L5 and H5 grades from Cambridge, Mass.

The H1's gift shop is still on display. They are making oilcloth and wooden toys. They are also making cloth and oilcloth pillows and getting costumes ready for dances and a play.

The H2 children have made a "Three Little Pigs" puppet show. They are working to dramatize it.

Miss Turrentine's L2 children are planning to go to the Zoo. When they come back they plan to make a zoo in their room.

HON. HOWARD B. RAND AT EPISCOPAL CHURCH SUNDAY

The Anglo-Saxon Federation is bringing its national secretary to Ocean Beach Sunday, January 13, 11 a.m. for a talk the subject of which has not yet been announced. This man, the Hon. Howard B. Rand, L.L.B., is an attorney from Massachusetts. He is an author, editor, economist and a very convincing lecturer. He is friendly to all faiths for the Federation is not a denomination. All interested in hearing Dr. Rand will be welcome at this Sunday morning service at Trinity Episcopal church.

"Another girl friend? Listen, you're the original great lover, aren't you?" She was mad to taunt him. Couldn't she see that he was working toward frenzy? Prudence looked at the bolts on the door behind her. Suppose Calloway turned the tables and kept Milly and herself prisoners here? That was a thought. It sent icy prickles soloing up her spine.

"Let me go, Len! Make it snappy." Milly's voice was strained.

"And suppose I don't?" "You will. You are such a just man," Prudence, emerging from her hiding place, reminded sweetly.

Calloway wheeled and scowled at her backed against the double door. Milly shrugged, pulled a vanity case from her pocket and applied a lipstick.

"Took you a long time to put on your act, didn't it. I saw you stealing away from the red brick house. I went there to ask if I might see the rooms. I lived there once. You sneaked across the road. I knew—I knew Roddy liked you. So I followed to see what you were up to. Didn't kid yourself. I found out. You came to meet that rotten Walt Gerard."

Had the roof collapsed on her? She, Prudence Schuyler, was being accused of a rendezvous with that sneaky man!

"Don't be foolish!" She tried to keep her voice condescendingly amused; she succeeded only in producing words which shook with anger. "If you are interested to know, I am because Calloway and Walter Gerard are conspiring to hurt Rodney."

Milly caught the arm of the man who stood scowling from one girl to the other.

"Have you hurt Roddy, Len? If you have—"

Her small pointed white teeth set in her under lip like those of an angry cat.

The veins in Calloway's temples stood out like cords. "Didn't I tell you when you threw me down for him, Milly, that I would run Rodney Gerard off the earth? Well, I'm doing it, off this part of the earth. He'll think twice before he cuts in on my girl or my business again."

Milly shook him. "You great sap! You—you flat fire!" Her voice rose in shrill invective. "Rodney Gerard had nothing to do with my throwing you over. It was Walt! Your present pal, Walt!"

"Walt! Don't try to be funny. Did Walt have your picture with 'From Calico and Calloway to Liberty and Love,' written on the back of it? Did he keep it in the room Rod uses for his office at High Ledges? Walt! Try another alibi, Milly, try another." She shook him again with as much effect as a mouse attempting to pull down a stone lion.

"Have you gone haywire? I never sent a photo to Roddy—the one you saw belonged to Walt. I suppose he could use a desk at High Ledges, couldn't he? You make me sick with your suspicions of Roddy. What have you two racketeers done to him?"

Calloway's face was as colorless as white chalk. "Say that again about Walt Gerard having that picture, Milly."

"I'll say it again. Shall I tell all? It isn't a bedtime story. It might have been more snappy if it hadn't been for Rodney Gerard. I was dead sick of working and one-night stands and shabby clothes and Grundpork sick and out of a job most of the time. Walt came along and offered to make life's walk easy—for a consideration. And can be hand out a line, I'm telling you!" Her eyes and voice tormented.

"Before I closed with his offer, Rodney found it out and—and he made it easy for no consideration. Get that, Len?"

"Is that right?" "Sure, a hundred per cent right. I'm telling the truth! Rodney Gerard doesn't know I'm on earth—except when it's time to send me a check or bring me one. I've kept on making the money so I would see him sometimes."

He glared at her unseeing. "So-o I've been hunting the wrong man, have I? Walt was back of your break with me! Rod Gerard has been shielding his no-account brother. And I thought I was such a just man! I—"

His face worked horribly. Prudence felt as if a stripped soul had been laid bare.

A wall like the warning of a giant baubee swelled to a dening screech, dwindled, rose again to ear-splitting proportions, died down.

"What's that?" "Shut up, Milly! Listen! Count!" Calloway's voice was hoarse.

Prudence clenched her hands. The fire siren! Suppose it were the red brick house. Would Macky think to rescue the Paul Lamerie kettle?

Calloway pulled Milly away from the door. She gripped his arm.

"What is it, Len?"

"Fire! Gerard place! I—I—did it! I didn't mean that—I only wanted to keep the men from work!"

He jammed back the bolt and plunged into the snow. Prudence dashed after him. The fire must be near. The cattle barn! Walter Gerard and Calloway! "The cart's backed up." Had that "cart" been loaded with explosives?

The headlights of a car flashed Calloway's! A tall-light swept away like a meteor pursued by furies. Prudence stumbled and slid and ran along the road made smooth and treacherous by the passing of many trucks. She couldn't go back for her sis.

"Wait! Wait! What's burning?" Milly Gooch shrieked.

Prudence stopped long enough to call over her shoulder:

"The barn—where—the crew—is living—I think!"

Shouts ahead. Crashes. Timber-falling? A curious sky. Red. Sullen. Shot with flame. The light had put out the stars. She coughed and tried to get her breath. Ahead the cattle barn loomed darkly against the sinister glow. Black figures like huge panicky ants dashed in and out of the glow. Men were dragging a hose from the fire engine to the pond. Some one shouted:

"Soak those pines! If the woods start to burn—"

That was the reason of the frightful tension. Even with snow on the ground the whole forest might go up like tinder.

Runabouts, gigs, automobiles of all descriptions crowded the spaces under the trees. Men worked, ran, hauled. No mistaking Calloway's massive figure. Reckless of self and safety he fought the blaze. There was David, steadying a groaning man. He was safe, thank God!

Clang! Clang! Clang! The emergency gong of an ambulance! It must have come from the hospital in the next town.

Tree by tree Prudence crept forward. The heat was scorching. Not hotter for her than for those men working near that red inferno. She put her arm across her face to protect it from sparks and hot cinders.

Rodney in that inferno. Prudence shut her eyes tight to get her grip. Then she looked. The cry of horror she swallowed nauseated her. "Don't dare go back on me!" she threatened her dizzy brain.

Milly Gooch here! How had she come? Milly, her short black hair blowing in the breeze which was fanning the fire, was clinging to Rodney's sleeve. He was trying to shake her off. He had succeeded. Why, why did he go toward that burning shell again? Jim was pulling him back. He couldn't stop the fire. He—

Roars of warning. A crash? The roof? A red-hot girder shot into the air. A woman screamed. It spiraled down! Down where Rodney Gerard and Jim were standing!

Terror paralyzed Prudence. Rodney hurt? She couldn't bear it! Hurt before she could tell him she was sorry. Men were crowding round something. What? Why was she standing here when—

She ran forward and careened into someone running, with a force which swept her from her feet. An arm caught her.

"Prue! Prue! You shouldn't be here!"

She brushed her hand across dazed eyes. Was this really Jim Armstrong? He was safe! Was Rodney lying there hurt—perhaps?

"Is it really—you? I saw you and Rodney—I thought the girder hit—" She seized the lapels of his coat to steady herself. "Is—is he—"

Armstrong gently but firmly loosened her tense fingers. His lips were white as he assured with exaggerated cheeriness:

"Rod is safe, Prue. Listen! Don't stare like that! He's all right. It's Calloway who is hurt. He rushed in and took the girder which would have wiped Rod out."

She felt herself going, flung an arm around Jim's neck. She must hold tight to something. Was that Rodney looking at her from behind Jim? His eyes were terrible. Curious, the world was so black, the sky was—so red—

When she came out of the smothering gloom, she was sitting on a coat against a tree. Who was shrieking and sobbing? It couldn't be herself having hysterics, could it? She would die of shame if it were. David was rubbing her hands. A man in a white jacket was holding something to her mouth. Jim Armstrong was looking down at her. How queer his eyes were! Where was Rodney Gerard?

She said unsteadily:

"Don't tell me I fainted when I might have been—of use."

The ambulance surgeon's grin slashed his sooty face. "Use! You did your good deed for the day, all right. For the love of Mike, why doesn't someone stop that circus rider's yelling! I guess if anyone was entitled to pass out cold you were. Drink this like a good girl!"

CHAPTER XII

Bent over her work bench, the sleeves of her green linen smock rolled above her elbows, Prudence was intent on soldering the last link in the collar for Jean's kitten.

Finished. And a piece of work which made her artistic self purr when she looked at it. This was the last piece of Christmas work. To-morrow would be Christmas.

Christmas! Two weeks since the fire! She had not seen Rodney Gerard. Every moment she could spare from work outside had been spent at her bench, and he had not come to the red brick house. David rarely mentioned him. Why should he come? What modern man would be interested in a girl who "passed out cold" in an emergency?

Her face burned. Why, why had she collapsed for the second time in her life—like a mid-Victorian heroine in a crisis, when she might have gone on helping! Even the fact that she had forgotten to eat before she started on her man hunt, that her heart had stopped when the girder fell, as she supposed on Rodney, was no excuse.

She extinguished the lamp under the crucible and glanced at the bay window. Time enough to set the stones before she dressed for the party.

The party! She opened a white packet and poked the cat's eyes on the tissue paper into the order in which she would use them. How they glowed! They were like eyes. Inscrutable eyes. Like Rodney's the night they had met hers over Jim Armstrong's shoulder. What had he thought when he saw her clinging to his friend? Only one thing he could think after she had told him that she was engaged to Jim. She had led to set an insurmountable wall between them, and then she had found that no barrier was needed because, rich or poor, she knew that she loved him, that he would be true and fine all his life. She hadn't been sure of it, though, until Milly Gooch had flung the truth at Calloway that night in the smithy. She had wanted love without risk of heartbreak; it looked as if she would get heartbreak without love.

The morning after the cattle barn had burned to the ground, every able-bodied man in the village had dropped his own work to help rebuild. Each man of the scorched, chastened crew, who had been able to use his hands, had tried to do the work of three in the woods. They had been billeted in barns. They ought to work their arms off—hadn't their rioting caused the damage? That wasn't quite fair; the truck which Len Calloway and Walter Gerard had dumped at their door had been the real cause.

The new building had gone up as quickly as if a Radio City engineer had waved a magic wand. In appreciation of the neighborly spirit, Rodney Gerard was giving a Christmas eve party to the townspeople. Milly Gooch would not be among those present. She had left the Puffers' the day after the fire.

Although David spent most of each day where the crew was working, he never mentioned Rodney Gerard. They were shutting her out. She would have loved to help in the preparations—she adored getting ready for parties—but:

"I couldn't crash in and offer my invaluable assistance, could I?" she interrogated the empty wheel, but the wheel merely threw off a spiteful little shower of pumice in answer.

Her thoughts kept pace with her foot on the treadmill. Would Rodney Gerard come for the collar? Perhaps he had forgotten it. What would she do with it? She would have liked the kittens to remind him. It had proved expensive. If they were friends as they had been that day he had ordered it—

Why live over that? It only made her heart ache as if something were squeezing it unbearably. Why had she been so obsessed with the idea that a man of wealth couldn't remain true to the marriage covenant? The fact that her brother's wife and her sister's husband had been philanderers was no excuse for misjudging Rodney.

"You shouldn't be working without a light, Miss Prue"

Prudence looked up with a start. "When did you steal in, Macky?"

"I didn't steal in. I don't like that word, Miss Prue." The shade of the lamp rattled as Jane Macky removed it.

"My mistake. Bring the light to the bench, will you?" She held up the collar.

"This is the best thing I've done yet. It's a triumph. I'm not pleased with myself, am I? It is a collar for Jean's kitten. See the little Macky Mouses?"

Jane Macky smiled. "You do so much for other people, Miss Prue, it's a shame you should have lost that emerald and the diamonds."

"Forget it. This is Christmas. I have a feeling that those stones will come back some day. I suspect—"

"Who, Miss Prue?" "Macky! Has the mere memory of that hold-up man turned you white? Hurry up and make us both a cup of tea. Everything ready for dinner to-morrow?"

"Yes, Miss Prue. I've had my tea. Saw a procession in the cup. Can't tell whether it's going to be a wedding or a party or a funeral."

Hours later, Prudence, squeezed into the back seat beside Mrs. Si in the Puffer-car, looked up at High Ledges.

"This is the party in your cup, Macky," she said gaily.

The windows were alight with candles. Evergreens gay with colored bulbs bordered the drive. An all-white Christmas tree, dripping with silver tinsel, glittering with artificial snow, glimmering with white bulbs, loomed on the lawn in a flood of light. The atmosphere throbbed with gayety and good cheer and Christmas spirit.

Prudence regarded herself in the long mirror in the dressing room. For the first time since she had left the city and festivities behind her, she was wearing an evening gown. The color was Christmas. Should she have worn a frock so backless to a party like this? Why not? It was her best, and the best was none too good for this festivity.

Her brother joined her in the hall. "I've been looking for you, Prue. Sorry not to wait and come with you, but Gerard wanted me here, early."

"He's always wanting you, David. I don't know where we would have tucked you into the Puffer-car had you waited. Isn't that music heavenly! I've never seen a more glorious Christmas tree! Looking pretty snappy, aren't you?" she approved gaily, to camouflage the surge of thanksgiving which shook her as she looked at him, apparently so strong, so well. "You are not terribly hard to look at yourself. Miss Mack is doing her bit for the honor of the family. She is stiff with black glitter, and she is smiling. Shall we go down?"

From the stairs Prudence saw Jean and Rodney Gerard greeting the arriving guests. Rodney looked up. The color mounted to his forehead as his eyes met Prue's. Her heart grew wings. He must have forgiven her, he must want to be friends again, or he wouldn't look at her like that. He crossed the hall and met her as she reached the lowest step.

"K. K. and I began to think you had passed up our party." He dropped the hand he had seized. "Help make people feel at home, will you?" he asked stiffly. "You'll find Jim in the next room," he flung over his shoulder as he turned away.

His voice had the effect of a shower of ice water. Anger burned away the chill. Was he afraid that she might expect him to devote himself to her if he showed even decent civility? He needn't worry. With chin up she entered the room in which dancers were swinging and humming to the rhythm of the music.

"Come out to the sun porch, Prue. I want to talk to you."

The grimness of Armstrong's voice generated prickles in her veins. Had he found out what she had told Rodney? Was he furiously angry? Perhaps he would sue her for saying that she was engaged to him. That was a cheerful thought for this merry Christmas.

Hiking 150 Years Old

Hiking is not modern, according to information revealed in London. It was called "pedestrianism" over a century ago, but the pastime was the same, according to a description in the Sporting Magazine, published in 1792. The opening paragraph of the article on pedestrianism declares that it is "an exercise which... has lately risen into much notice." It relates that Foster Powell, of Leeds, for a hundred-guinea wager, walked from London to York and back in five days, in the middle of November. He afterward accomplished several similar feats, and in his fifty-seventh year was still taking on bets. In 1765, according to the magazine, "a young woman went from Blencoe in Scotland to within two miles of Newcastle in one day, which is about 72 miles."

TRUE DETECTIVE STORY

by Vance Wynn © Public Ledger

The House on the Hudson

SEVERAL years ago Chief Flynn, of the United States Secret Service, discovered that counterfeit $2 bills were being circulated in large quantities in the eastern part of the country. His search first led him to Philadelphia, but the trail was imperfect and he returned to New York, where he finally located some of the men who were passing the bad money.

A general raid in various sections led to the arrest of twenty men, most of them Italians.

This was very well, as far as it went, but it did not go far enough for the detective.

His desire was to find the men who were manufacturing the money, and eventually he got a clue which made him believe that the plant of the conspirators was located in a town on the Hudson river in New York State.

He went there and discovered what was called, in the language of the department, a deserted house.

It was not actually deserted, because an aged Italian and his wife were living there, and when they learned the mission of Mr. Flynn they vigorously protested their innocence of any wrongdoing.

But paper and ink had been shipped to this town of Highland, and when he made a search of the premises he discovered dies and other tools used in the making of counterfeit money.

He decided not to arrest the old couple, feeling that premature action might enable the real culprits to escape.

He returned to New York again and in the course of a few weeks managed to get on the trail of two men who were known to be in the business of making bogus money.

Salvatore Cueno and Vincent Gaghio were the suspected ones, and it did not take long to satisfy the secret service man that they were connected with the deserted house on the Hudson and knew something about the $2 bills which were being circulated in the Eastern cities.

They were shadowed day and night. The chief spent his days in his office laying his plans and his evenings in gathering evidence.

One morning one of his men called at the office and told him that the suspects knew they were being shadowed, and had been heard making threats against him.

He shut his lips grimly and decided upon his plan of action.

The threat which had come to him was regarded as a challenge.

Flynn accepted it.

That night he started out as usual, but instead of pursuing his usual round of investigation he made straight for the saloon where he was likely to find the two men he was interested in.

It was the sort of thing that required nerve, but anyone who is acquainted with this great detective knows that he is not deficient in courage.

The door of the place was shut and locked.

He knocked on the panels and demanded admittance.

The door was opened on a crack. Flynn pushed his way in, and found that the saloon was crowded with a motley assemblage of men and boys, most of whom were easily recognizable as inhabitants of the underworld.

His dramatic entrance filled them with awe.

For some moments they stood there looking at him without saying a word.

Before they had time to recover from their surprise he pulled a revolver and shouted:

"Hands up, everybody!"

He had planned all of this before he entered the place.

He knew the psychology of crowds. He knew, especially, the kind of men he would have to deal with.

The result was exactly what he had anticipated.

Every man in the saloon raised his hands, and the next moment a corps of assistants rushed into the place and placed the men under arrest. Among them were the two men he was after.

They were taken before a United States commissioner and held for trial.

When the trial took place some time later the evidence was so complete and conclusive that they were promptly convicted and sentenced to long terms in the penitentiary.

Most of the other persons caught in the raid were released, but it is a significant fact that the manufacturing and circulation of the counterfeit bills ceased from that time.

It was a clever piece of detective work, involving keen headwork and personal courage.

Iron Age Relics Are Found

Relics of an early iron age have been found in the caves at Ballintoy, northern Ireland, by a group of archaeologists under Dr. J. A. W. Jackson of the Manchester museum. The most remarkable and unique find was a roughly finished female figure in baked clay, which was similar to some of the clay figures of Crete and other Mediterranean places of ancient times. A fireplace, built of large water-worn stones was unearthed at a depth of six feet. It was partially surrounded by a wall of similar stones. Among the worked bones were piercers and needles, including a very fine polished needle about two inches long, with a perfectly formed eye.

JAUNTY LOOK IN THIS TWO-PIECE MODISH DESIGN

PATTERN 9170

No wonder the young lady sketched here is so jaunty! With buttons up the blouse-front in a military manner, neat sleeves carrying out the button motif in their unusual cuffs, and a slenderizing paneled skirt—who wouldn't be in a high mood? The tabs at the neck are the latest idea in what a snappy neckline should be. So is the triangular scarf which slips underneath them and ties in a porky knot at the back. The small view shows a scarf and bow of ribbon. Make it up in ribbed or nubby wool and wear it with a Tyrolean felt hat. It's a high-spirited frock for a high-spirited girl—or woman.

Pattern 9170 may be ordered only in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, and 42. Size 16 requires 2 1/2 yards 54-inch fabric and 3/4 yard 36-inch contrasting.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins are preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Send your order to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 232 West Eighth Street, New York.

CUT IN NUMBER OF ILLITERATES

Announcement that the national government had mobilized 40,000 unemployed teachers this winter in a drive on illiteracy revives interest in census figures on illiterates, that is to say, persons who cannot write any language.

In 1930 the United States had 4,283,000 illiterates, or 4.3 per cent of the population 10 years old and over. That was a large decline from the 6 per cent who were classified as illiterates when the census of 1920 was taken, but in Alabama four years ago 12.6 per cent of the inhabitants more than 10 years old were illiterate. In Louisiana they numbered 13.5 per cent, in Mississippi 13.1 per cent and in South Carolina 14.9 per cent. The high percentages in the southern states were due largely, of course, to the negro population. Only 2.3 per cent of Missouri's inhabitants could not write, a reduction from 3 per cent in 1920, and between the census counts our negro population had increased through a migration from the South. In New York four years ago the number of illiterates was 339,000, or 3.7 per cent. Illiterates constituted 3.5 per cent of the total inhabitants in Massachusetts, 2.3 per cent in Ohio, 2.4 in Illinois and less than 1 per cent in Iowa, the smallest percentage in the country. Illiterates in the white population in 1930 numbered 2,407,000, a decline from 4 per cent in 10 years. Illiteracy among negroes declined from 22.9 per cent to 16.3 per cent in the decade, leaving a total of 1,514,000.

These figures show that illiteracy is decreasing at a rather rapid rate in all classes of the population and in all parts of the country. But they also show that the total number of persons who cannot write is surprisingly large for a nation where education is compulsory, a fact which is explained, of course, by immigration and our negro population. And among the young foreign born the percentage of illiteracy is small, though large among adults of this class.

That a large number of adults can be taken out of this classification by a drive directed by the government is not certain. But it will give work to thousands of unemployed teachers, whose plight is particularly distressing, and it will surely give some further momentum to the decline in illiteracy.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

THIS OLD-TIMER SEEMS TO HAVE HAD RIGHT IDEA

Henry Clay Offutt was ninety when he died recently in Kansas City. In his last years he did not escape the queries as to the philosophy of life that brings one to an advanced age with zest to the end. Older men than Mr. Offutt have given it out that they never smoked or drank, or that they did smoke or drink, that they were fresh air advocates or closed window sleepers, vegetarians or meat eaters, proving only that what is meat to one person may be poison to another. Not that Mr. Offutt did not have his little special practices. He was a checker player. The trouble with most of us, he once said, is that we do not play enough checkers. He never knew what it was to be bored.

The philosophy of this old-timer was in fact a little deeper than the homely way he put it. He illustrated it by his favorite game, checkers. What it implies, if we look into it deeply enough, is tranquility of mind. The world went bad at times, great problems loomed, great troubles came. Men made themselves sick and found earlier graves through worry and fear. When Mr. Offutt figured that there was nothing he could do about it anyway, he played checkers.

Not to take the philosophy of the departed old gentleman too literally, we may find in it nevertheless something of great value. It should teach us not to take ourselves or our life too seriously. We shall be a long time dead, but the world will go right along. To be sure, it is contrary to all the principles of rush and hurry, high pressure speed, and "beat them to it" in chasing the dollar, that seem to be in our American blood. But we can rush ourselves to death.

Maybe more of us would live in health and vigor to ninety, if we played more checkers, or something.—Minneapolis Journal.

NEW KIWANIS PRESIDENT PRESIDES AT FIRST MEETING

Ed Wickern, newly installed president of Ocean Beach Kiwanis club, presided at the Wednesday luncheon meeting. This first meeting of the year was a round table informal meeting with discussion by members on topics especially interesting to them and the club's welfare.

The organization feels it is an important factor in community life and is anxious to build up the membership with those men who are interested in the general welfare of the people and Point Loma and beach district.

Short talks were given by past presidents, I. J. Claspill, Herb Mohan, I. W. Parks and Myron Insko. Norman Maw of the San Diego club and Bob Leishman of San Gabriel club were visiting Kiwanians.

ANNIVERSARY WEEK JAN. 20

"The 20th anniversary of the founding of Kiwanis International will be observed by the local Kiwanis club during the week of January 20 to 26," said Ed Wickern, president of the club, today. The first Kiwanis club was organized in 1915 at Detroit. On January 21, the first meeting was held.

The committee on Kiwanis education is in charge of the program for the Ocean Beach club. Members of this committee are I. J. Claspill, Myron Insko and Herb Mohan.

"At the anniversary week meeting there will be a special program for this occasion," said Mr. Wickern. "Kiwanis has made many valuable contributions to our community life and in the United States and Canada today it is offering a greater civic betterment and welfare program than ever before," he said.

Kiwanians here will join with the members of the 1,836 other clubs in all parts of the United States and Canada in observing this event. Dr. William J. Carrington, of Atlantic City, New Jersey, president of Kiwanis International has prepared a special message which is to be read at the anniversary meeting here.

Kiwanis Install Officers Ladies Night Program

An enjoyable evening by members of Ocean Beach Kiwanis and their wives was had last Friday at the Loma Tavern where a turkey dinner was served.

Joe Restine was chairman of the evening, being assisted by Tom Shore of San Diego in the installing of officers for 1935. Mr. Shore is a past lieutenant governor of Kiwanis, a charter member of San Diego club with which he has been affiliated fifteen years. The speaker first told of the organization of Kiwanis, then the forming of clubs in this section. The San Diego club being formed when the closest member clubs with which to visit were Yuma, Arizona, and one in Los Angeles. Tom's talk was inspirational, and he told the members of the fine work they might do in their community in worthwhile activities.

H. I. Bingham, better known to most of us as "Dad", gave two humorous original poems, one about an ocean fishing trip along with the evening's chairman as follows:

A man stood on the tossing deck
Of a boat well out to sea
His feet were braced, his face was tanned
For a fisherman was he.

The boat chugged on in circles wide
The engine sped in low
While from the stern his line trailed out
For fifty yards or so.

Thus hour by hour the boat plowed on
He to the deck rooted as a tree
Tho' many a time he changed his line
Yet ne'er a strike had he.

Then there came a mighty tug
And his line flew out apace
He gripped his rod with a firmer hand
While a smile stole o'er his face.

A strike he yelled—the boat was stopped
His reel did hum and spin
He played the drag with a skillful hand
Then tried to reel him in.

But the fish was strong and game as well
And he waged a mighty fight
He plunged the depths, swam round the boat
Now on the left side, now the right.

But the man was strong and skillful too
And he played the game to win
Tho' his arm was tired; his hat was gone
And the sweat rolled off his chin.

At last the fish was brought to bay
And he reached for him the gaff,
When his line went slack and we heard him say,
"Oh! Heck—The darn thing got away."

Dedicated to my good friend and brother fisherman. Joe Restine, in memory of a day at Coronado Islands.

"Dad" Bingham.

The officers installed for the ensuing year were as follows:
Ed H. Wickern, president
Dr. Frank R. Felt, vice president
Heber H. Hartvigsen, secretary
Rollin Reed, treasurer.
Myron Insko, junior past president was presented with a gold trimmed past president's button.
The balance of the evening Mr. Restine showed three reels of moving pictures, one taken at Balboa park, one at Boulder dam and the last, one of home life at the Restine residence during the Christmas holidays, with the youngsters enjoying their many new Christmas gifts.
